

projet : Classification des Tweets

Thameur Amal 3DNI1

Objectifs :

- Maitriser l'API de twitter pour l'extraction des tweets
- Maitriser la partie NLP (naturallanguageprocessing) avec NLTK en Python
- Appliquer les principes de nettoyage des données
- Classer les tweets: regrouper ensemble les tweets qui sont similaires. C'est une étape qui peut être considérée comme une étape

Spécifications :

Imaginons que vous avez un compte Twitter, et que vous lez suivre les tweets (texte très court) sur ce réseau social. Vu le nombre colossal de Tweets, et faute de temps, vous n'avez pas la possibilité de les lire tous. Pour cela, vous avez besoin d'une application qui va jouer le rôle d'assistant et qui va vous effectuer un résumé de toutes ces informations. Une des approches qu'on peut utiliser est de les classer sous forme de groupes de sorte à ce qu'on présente à l'utilisateur un seul Tweet de chaque groupe. Pour cela, on doit procéder en trois grandes étapes:

I: Prétraitement des tweets

Télécharger les Tweets à partir de Twitter en utilisant l'API de twitter. Pour cela, vous devriez un compte «Twitter Developer».

Tweets Cleaning:

Les tweets contiennent des objets inutiles tels que des hashtags, des mentions, des liens et des signes de ponctuation qui peuvent affecter les performances d'un algorithme et doivent donc être supprimés. Tous les textes sont convertis en minuscules pour éviter que les algorithmes n'interprètent les mêmes mots avec des cas différents comme différents.

II: Traitement destweets: NLP (Natural LanguageProcessing)

On doit procéder à l'analyse du tweet en respectant les différentes étapes du NLP (Natural LanguageProcessing):

Tokenization, Lemmatization and removing stopwords

In [31]: import nltk
nltk.download('stopwords' )

III: Classification des tweets

Utiliser l'algorithme K-Means pour classer les Tweets en k classes (vous pouvez essayer plusieurs valeurs de k allant de 3 à 30 par exemple).

In [39]: from sklearn.cluster import KMeans
        wcss = []
```

In [40]: #i above is between 1-10 numbers. init parameter is the random #initial #we select kmeans++ method. max_iter parameter the maximum number of it
        #find the final clusters when the K-means algorithm is running. we #en
        #the next parameter is n_init which is the number of times the #K_means
        #different initial centroid.
        #this loop will fit the k-means algorithm to our data and #second we will compute the within cluster sum of squares and #appended
        to our wcss list.
        for i in range(3, 30):
            kmeans = KMeans(n_clusters=i, init='k-means++', n_init=10, max_iter =300, random_state=0)
            #kmeans algorithm fits to the X dataset
            kmeans.fit(X)
            #kmeans inertia_ attribute is: Sum of squared distances of samples
            #to their closest cluster center.
            wcss.append(kmeans.inertia_)

```
In [41]: plt.plot(range(3,30), wcss)
        plt.title('Elbow Method')
        plt.xlabel('Number of Clusters')
        plt.ylabel('wcss')
